AGING IN RURAL PLACES: PROGRAMS, POLICIES, AND PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE BY KRISTINA HASH PHD MSW, ELAINE JURKOWSKI MSW PHD, JOHN KROUT PHD PDF

Research documents that rural elders are poorer, live in less adequate housing, and have far fewer health and service options available to them than their urban counterparts, yet there is a critical lack of current and detailed information on the problems facing rural elders and on the professional practices that serve this population. This text fills this gap by introducing readers to rural areas and their residents and discussing the issues, programs, and policies designed to meet their needs. Through a multidisciplinary lens, it examines and defines specific competencies required for successful work with older adults and their families in these communities.

The text presents a research-driven, competency-based approach for the health and human service professionals who work with older rural residents. It discusses both the problems facing older adults and their families and evidence-based solutions regarding policy and best practices. Key issues examined include health and wellness, transportation, housing, long-term care, income, employment, and retirement, along with the needs of special populations (ethnic minorities, immigrants, and the LGBT population). Case examples reinforce an interdisciplinary model that addresses practice with rural elders that encompasses professional competencies, values and ethics, and the roles of a spectrum of health and human service professionals. The text also examines current policies affecting health and social services to rural elders and recommendations for policy change to build an effective health and human service workforce in rural communities. Links to Podcast interviews with scholars and respected professionals working in the field and "Spotlight" excerpts from the text reinforce information. In addition, the text provides discussion questions, PowerPoint slides, a test question bank, and suggested activities and exercises.

Highly Recommended

By Michael White

This text eloquently highlights the distinct and unique vulnerabilities that impact the aging population--specifically those living in rural places. As we emerge into the new managed health-care system, we must identify, assess, and intervene and provide services for those clients who are at a disadvantage and have unique needs. As Social Workers, it is our ethical obligation to ensure our competence.

Highly recommended for those practitioners from both urban and rural places to become more educated and aware of the unique vulnerabilities and complexities that result from serving the aging rural population.

By Shawn Allen

Great book! I used it in my Gerontology in Rural Practice class this summer. Students really gravitated to it and I received nothing but positive feedback. I highly recommend it to any gerontology practitioner, especially those practicing in a rural area, or wanting to learn more about rural practice!
